

RIO GRANDE DO SUL

Rio Grande do Sul is Brazil's premier wine-producing region, located in the country's southernmost state. Wine has been produced since the 1800s in the city of Garibaldi. Its cool climate in the Serra Gaúcha region, provides ideal conditions for growing high-quality wines. The region is known for its rich wine culture and diverse terroirs, which allow for the production of a wide range of wines, including notable sparkling wines.

With a strong Italian and German migrant influence, the region combines traditional winemaking techniques with modern innovations, producing wines that are gaining global recognition.

Fun fact: The natives of this state are called Gauchos, and it is also where the Brazeiro family comes from.
